WHAT: Facing the Future Educator Training: Science, Action and Engagement!

Teaching Global Sustainability in the Primary Grades: A K-4 Curriculum Guide

Global issues face us all, and whether population growth, sustainability, biodiversity, media literacy or the ecological footprint currently being left behind, there's no better time to seek out activities that encourage and empower students to think globally. If you're an educator looking for such lesson plans, then this is the event for you! Utilizing Facing the Future's "Teaching Global Sustainability in the Primary Grades: A K-4 Curriculum Guide," this teaching resource contains a set of four multi-faceted lessons covering topics such as identity and culture, food, biodiversity, and systems through diverse perspectives and learning modes. The book features hands-on activities, teacher background reading, vocabulary, extension and service learning opportunities, and assessment rubrics. All lessons included in this book have been reviewed and field tested by content experts, teachers, and students.
